Translator Notes | Page 6

I was too lazy to think of a smart English Pun for this work. Unless you didn't realize that Sarah isn't Japanese, may you share in her naivete as to what a "himehajime" really is.

Otherwise, "Himehajime" literally means "Princess' First (duty)", referring to any of several religious obligations to be observed during the New Year's. The term itself is similar to "Hatsumoude" (first temple visit on the New Year), but the latter need not be a temple visit. As of late, "Himehajime" has come to mean "first sexual intercourse for the year" for whatever reason. Out of the context, it's no wonder Yuutaro thought Sarah was asking for sex. Otherwise, any Japanese would read "himehajime" on a fortune as a benign decree for one to observe some religious piety.

MESSAGE FROM THE STAFF

I guess we're back?

Stuff happened and the team went into a genuine hiatus while people got their shit squared and I took a long look at how the team was run. I've made some changes to how we're run making it easier for people to keep going without burning out as easily as before. We'll see the results of the changes in the coming months. Don't count us out just yet.

-Tech

*Not sure if my work on this was sped along, or delayed by the almost real-time IMs via Skype cough- Techcough but done is done, and it's been a while anyway. Overall, being back at it feels good, man.*

-Kita

WHAT A NICE WAY TO REBOOT THE GROUP. TECH IS OUT TO CONQUER THE WORLD. HELP THE MAN.

Please, if anybody with experience in the scene would like to join up, please email me at gteamtranslators@gmail.com
