We are currently recruiting
another translator!

In addition to preserving the original Japanese name order, Manab& Detective Agency is committed to ensuring that honorifics-polite speech that indicates a person's status or relationship towards another individual-are retained within this book. Politeness is an integral facet of Japanese culture and we believe that maintaining honorifics in our translations helps bring out the same character nuances as seen in the original work. The following are some of the more common honorifics you may come across while reading this and other books:

-san - The most common of all honorifics, it is an all-purpose suffix that can be used in any situation where politeness is expected. Generally seen as the equivalent to Mr., Miss, Ms., Mrs., etc.

-sama - This suffix is one level higher than "-san" and is used to confer great respect upon an individual.

-kun - This suffix is commonly used at the end of boy's names to express either familiarity or endearment. It can only be used when addressing someone younger than oneself or of a lower status.

Senpai - This title is used towards one's senior or "superior" in a particular group or organization. "Senpai" is most often used in a school setting, where underclassmen refer to the upperclassmen as "senpai," though it is also commonly said by employees when addressing fellow employees who hold seniority in the workplace. (Note: "Sempai" is sometimes used as an alternate spelling)

Kouhai - This is the exact opposite of "senpai," and is used to refer to underclassmen in school, junior employees at the workplace, etc.

-chan - This suffix is mainly used to express endearment towards girls, but can also be used when referring to little boys or even pets. Couples are also known to use the term between one another to convey a sense of cuteness and intimacy.

Oniisan - This title literally means "big brother." First and foremost it is used by younger siblings towards older male siblings. It can be used by itself or attached to a person's name as a suffix (-niisan). It is often used by a younger person toward an older person unrelated by blood, in this case as a sign of respect. Other forms include the informal "oniichan" and the more respectful "oniisama." "Onesama" is the female variant.

Sensei - Literally meaning "one who has come before," this title is used for teachers, doctors, or masters of any profession or art.
