TN: There's a lot of gender confusion in the main character's speech in this chapter. I tried to mix up the pronouns enough and such to bring it across, but there were a lot of cases where it would be impossible (ie, at one point, the kanji for boy was used, but it had furigana for girl). Mainly in the scenes where he's coming to climax as a girl, he's completely mixed up as to whether he's turned on as a girl being watched, or as a boy at the thought of watching himself. The last line doesn't make much sense if you aren't aware of this gender dysphoria that's present, and the notion that it isn't just 'other' girls that the MC doesn't understand.
