

YOU GUYS CAN JUST GO BACK
AND EAT A DONGO OR SOMETHING
AND WAIT
FOR ME.

IF SHE'S REALLY
A SPECTER, I'M GONNA ASK HER
HOW SHE FLIES
IN THE AIR AND
ALL THAT OTHER STUFF.

Okay, I actually chuckled when they named the trap Conan, but I'd better get to the explanation I'm sure some people are waiting for. The two characters in this are actually Oda Nobunaga (the guy) and a parody of Future Boy Conan (the trap). Kippoushi is the given name Nobunaga had as a child. Soldier of Fortune was a popular book written about his exploits that dubbed him as such. It's pretty accurate too if you know about his history. I can't remember if he was actually called that historically or not. Oh well. Okehazama was the site of his famous battle against Imagawa Yoshimoto. I'm hoping you already know who Nobunaga is, but just google him if you don't. I'm sure wikipedia has a huge entry on him. The trap calls himself "Future Sleuth Conan", which is a parody of the main character of the famous classic anime "Future Boy Conan." (Mirai Shounen Conan). In it, the kid's basically (he thinks) the lone survivor of a fucked up future Earth along with his Grandpa. Turns out he's not, as he meets a girl the same age named Lana. SHIT. GETS. REAL. Anyway, they parodied that name into a time-traveller (I'm guessing) that crossdresses and fucks various historical figures.

The translation was actually quite vanilla. Nobunaga was known for being weird in his younger days, so I tried to keep that in tact with his dialogue. Thank god it didn't go into too much depth with Conan, because I haven't seen it in years, and then I'd have to take the time to research it. Ugh.

Next is gonna be Boku no Pacostant by Chinzuriina. I'm assuming that world is an amalgamation of words, including "assistant", because I have no idea what the fuck it means. I'll have to read through the story. Until next time.

HAPPY FAPPING!
