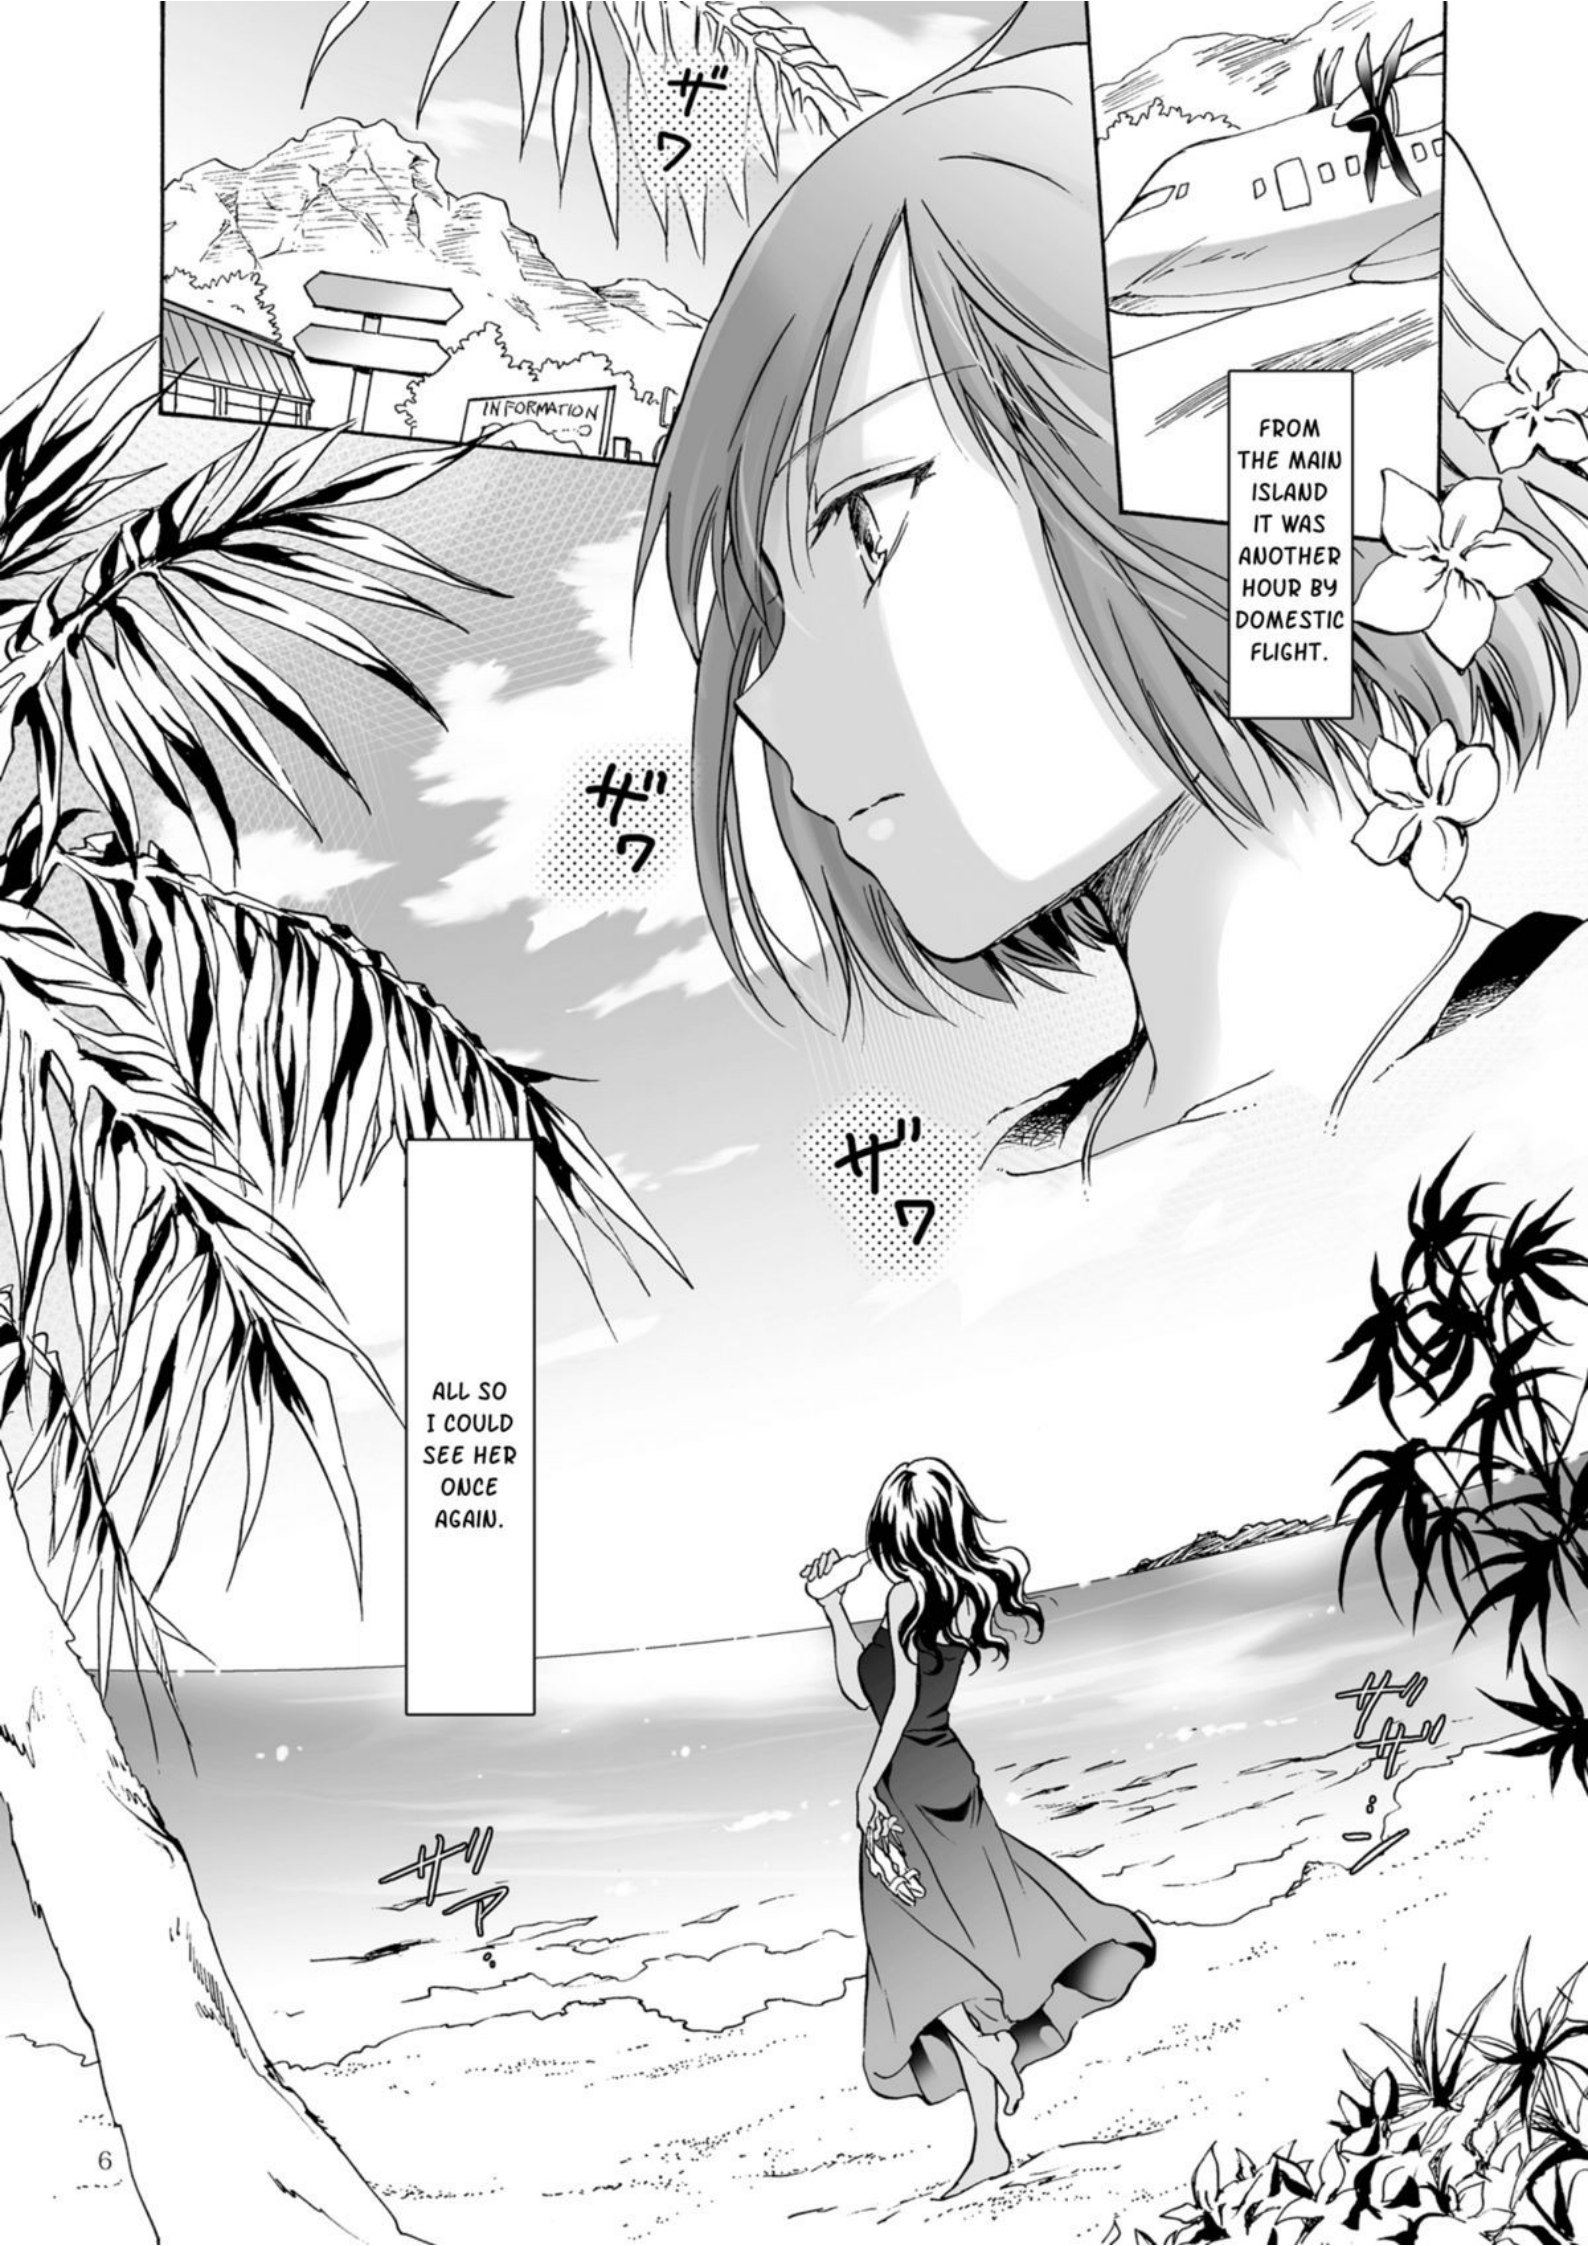
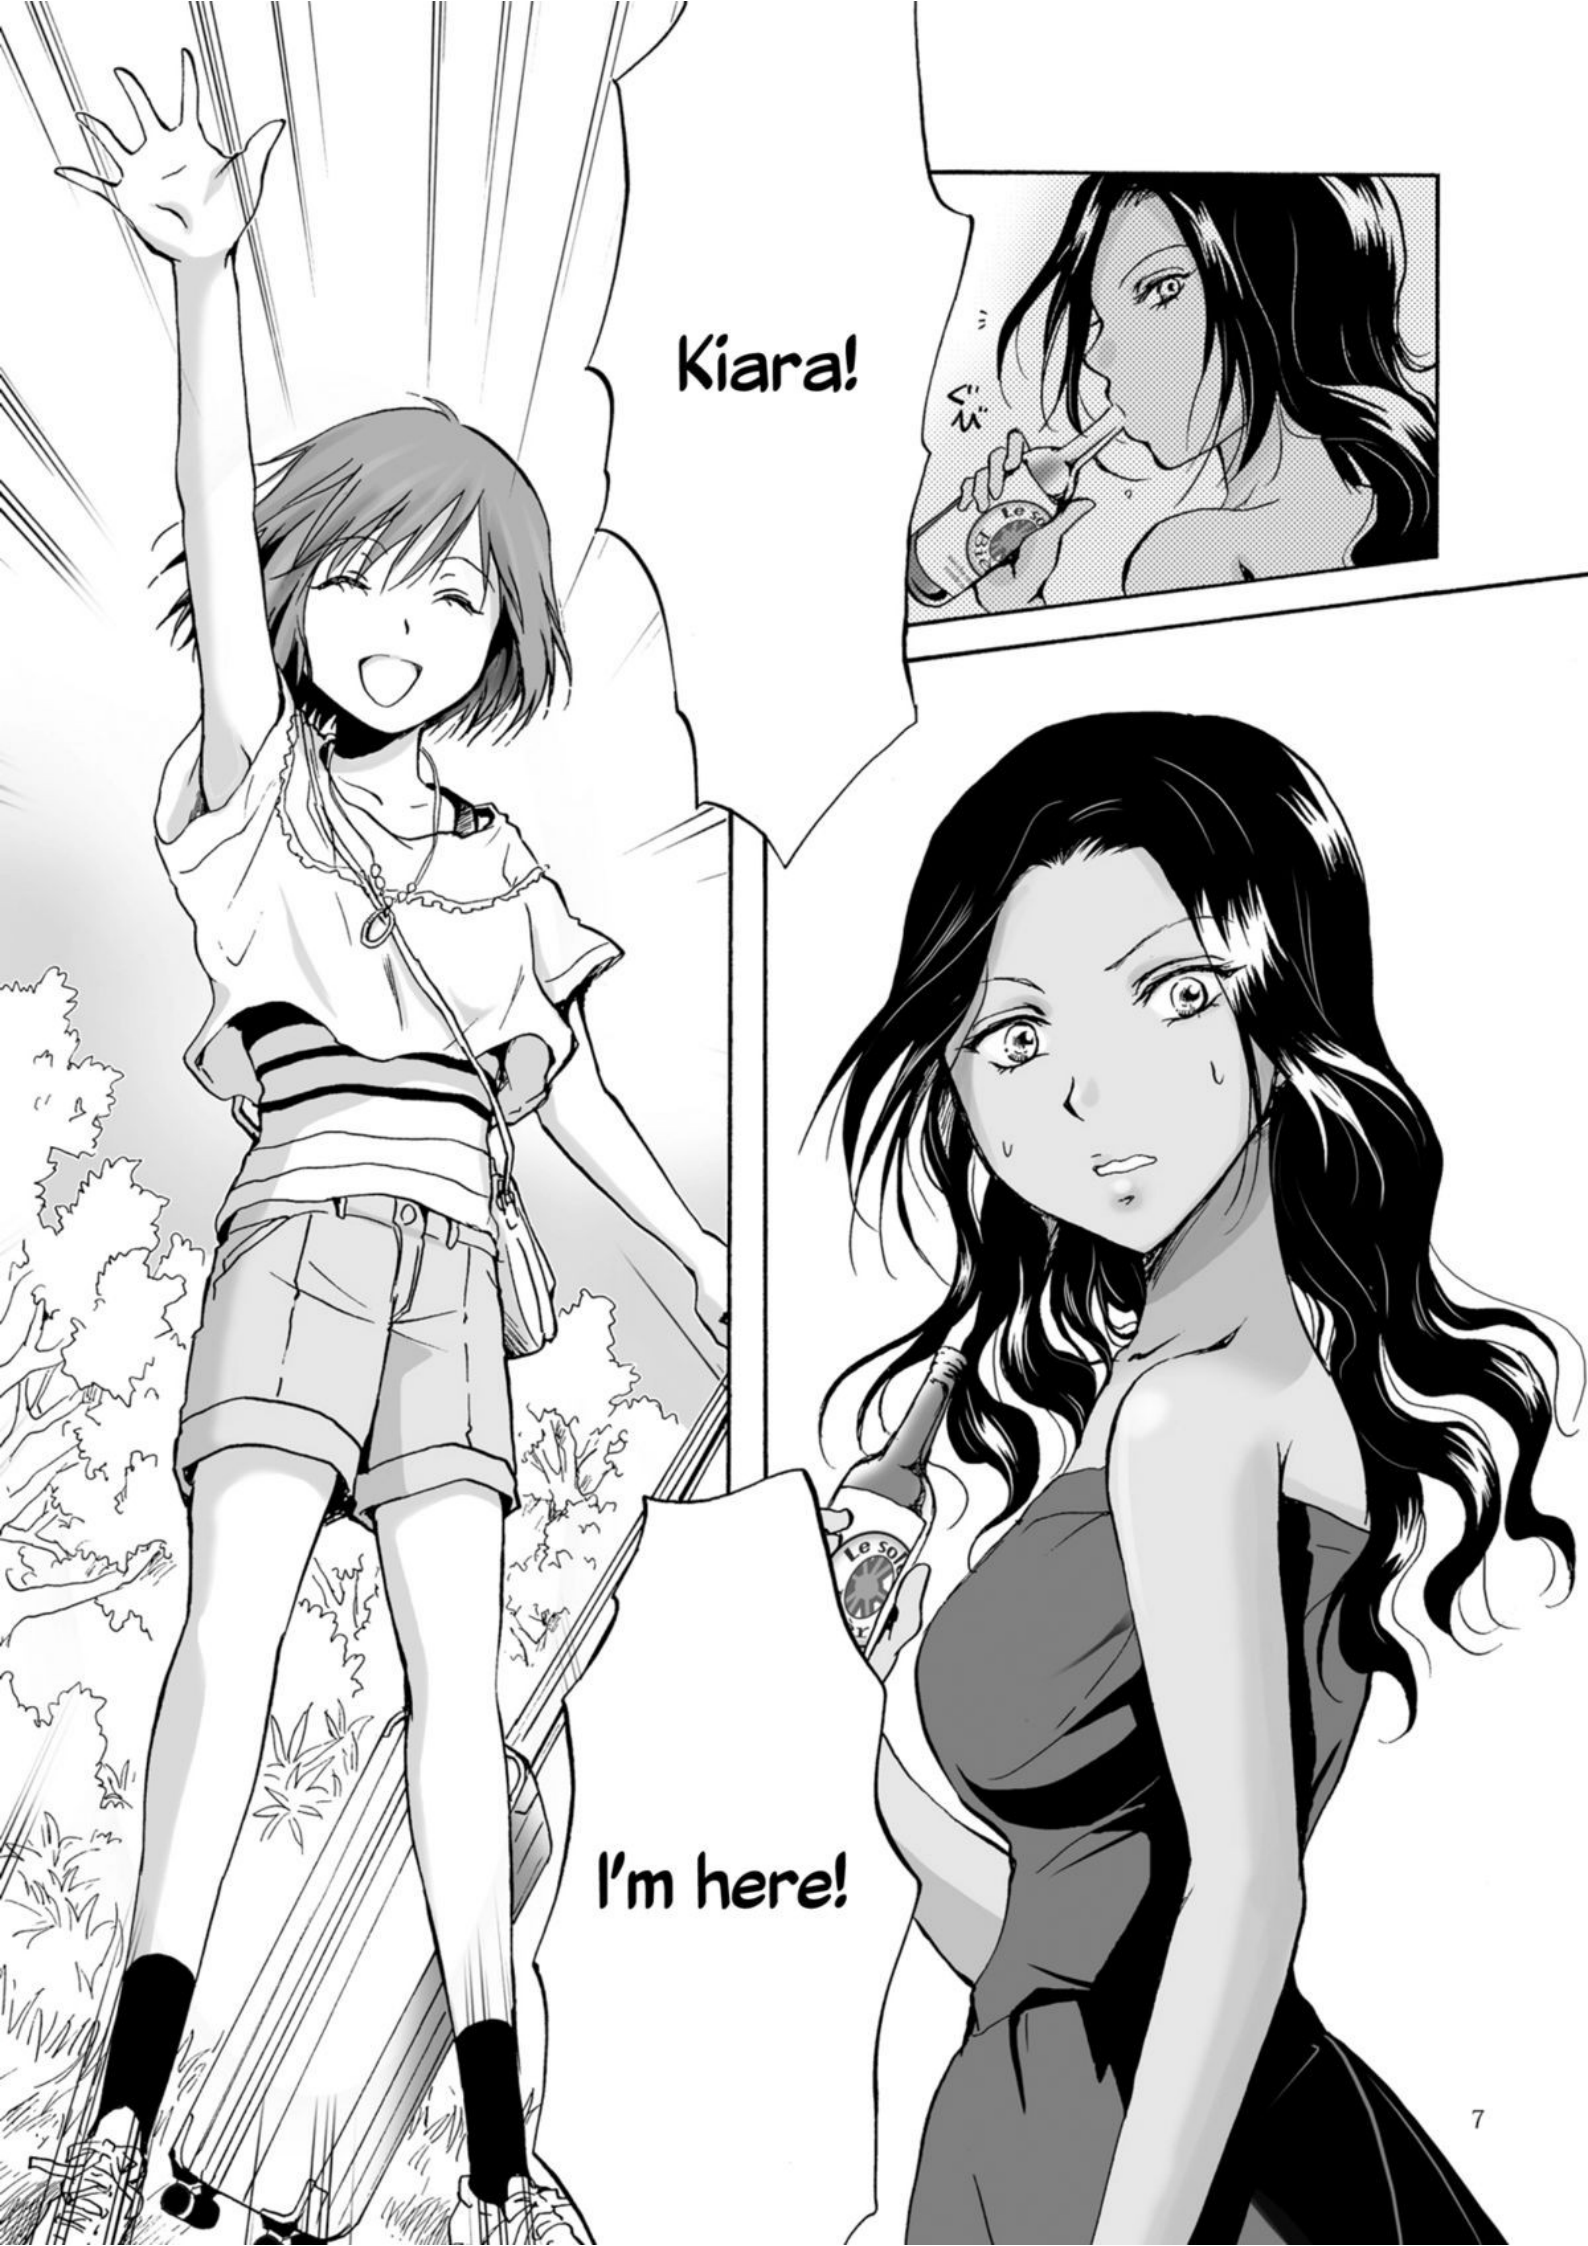
IT WAS 14 HOURS AWAY FROM NARITA.
WELCOME



INFORMATION
FROM THE MAIN ISLAND IT WAS ANOTHER HOUR BY DOMESTIC FLIGHT.
ALL SO I COULD SEE HER ONCE AGAIN.



Kiara!
I'm here!

This can't be real!

W-Why are you here,

Nozomi!?

It's a small island,

lying on coral.

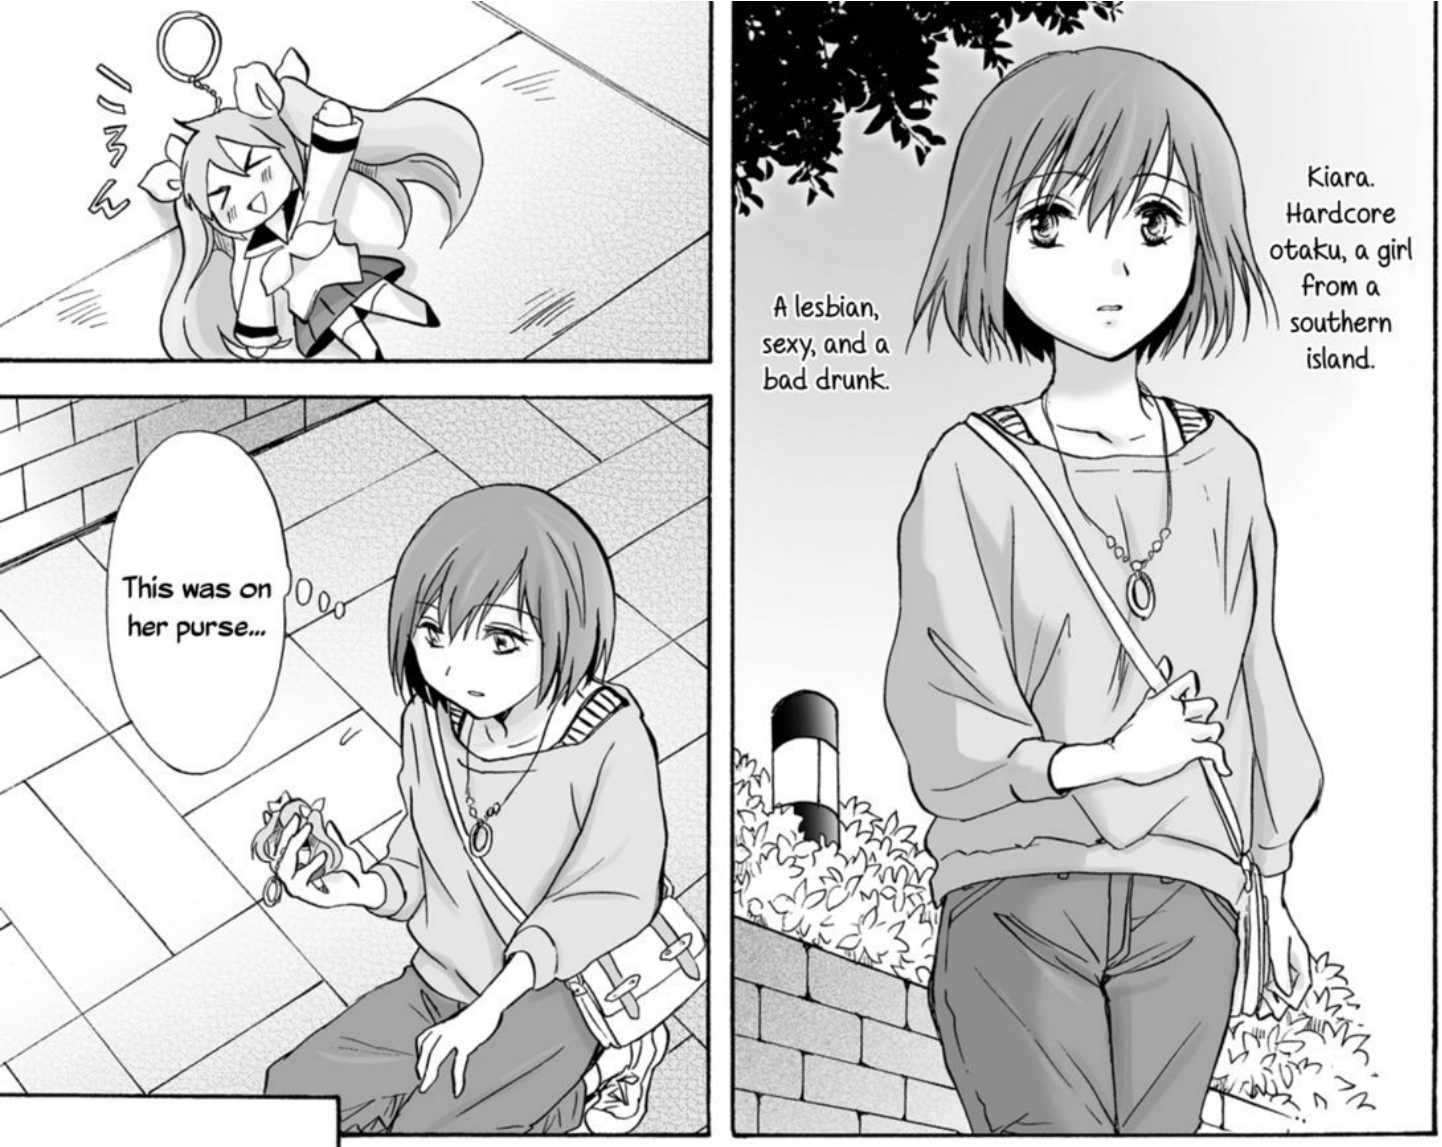
I'm really sorry about all of this.
her existence was etched into my heart.
Sorry for troubling you.
Well then... goodbye.
... Oh...take care.



This feeling...

what is it?

I want to know more about her.

I want to talk with her more.

This isn't how I want it to end.

I want to experience

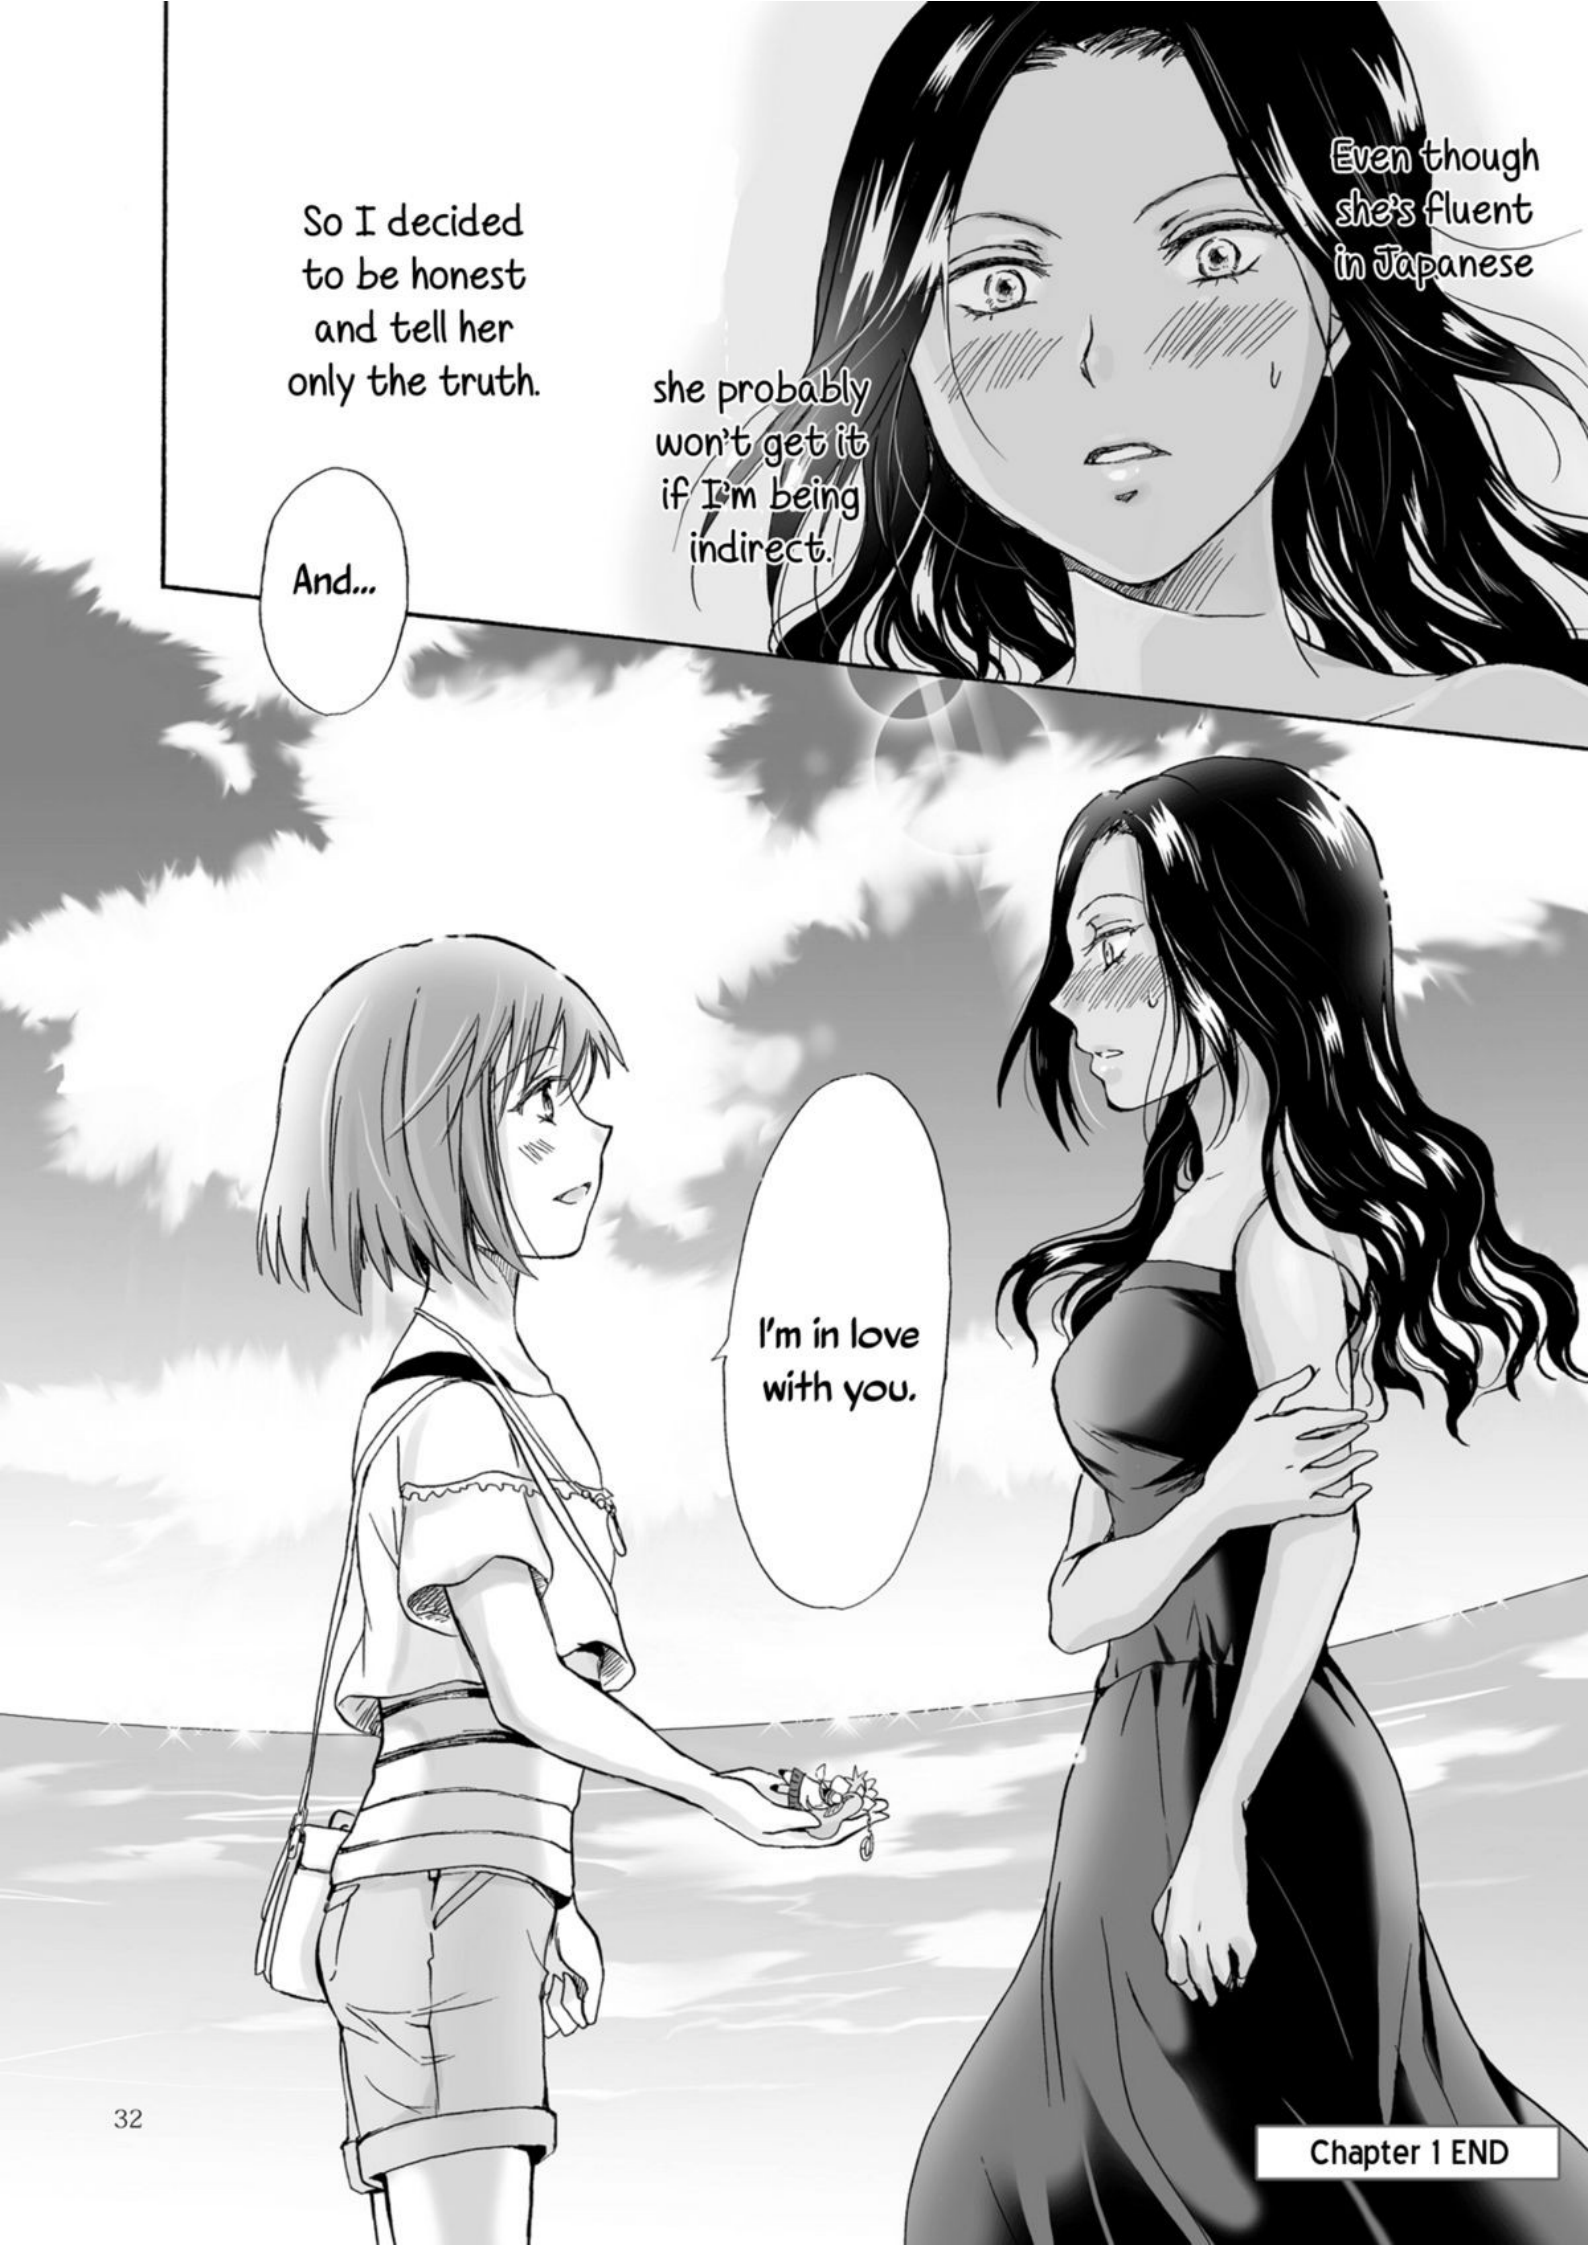
How could they be so irresponsible?!
Here, I was trying to return this.
You dropped it.



So I decided to be honest and tell her only the truth.
Even though she's fluent in Japanese
she probably won't get it if I'm being indirect.
And...
I'm in love with you.

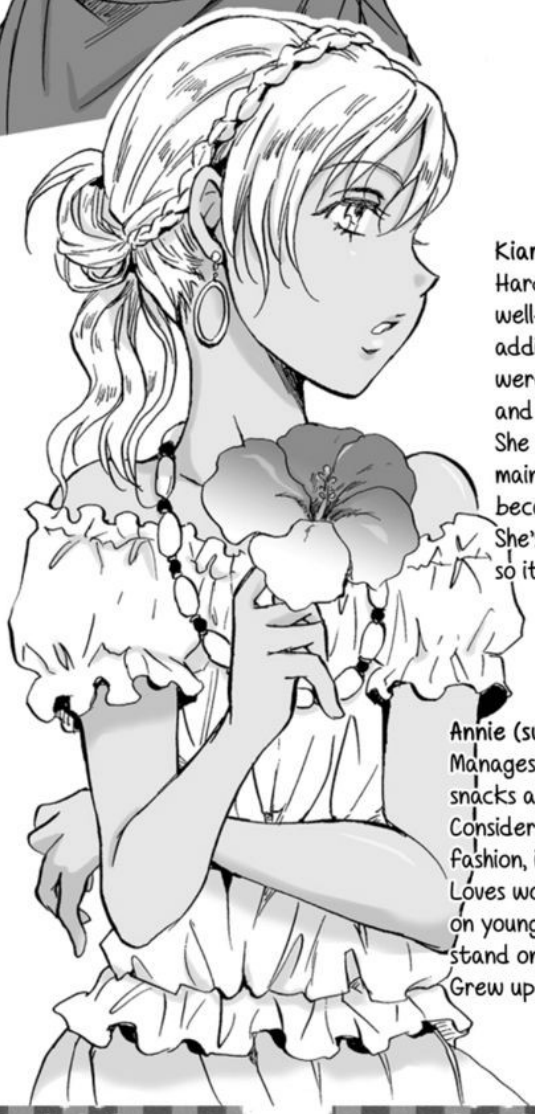
CHARACTER MEMO

(Mochizuki Nozomi) Age: 23
A hardworking part-timer...until she stopped working because she couldn't get extended leave to come to the island. And without money, she had to move out of her apartment too. Her housewife skills passed down from her grandmother are top-notch. Good at Japanese cuisine, but bad at pasta or dressing fashionably. Has a smartphone, but cancelled her contract, so now it's just a minicomputer. Usually a quiet person, but once she's decided on something she'll rush into it. ...It's really a shock for her friends.

Her hair really should be tucked in more but then you wouldn't recognize who she was. Please forgive me if you work in the industry. (lol)



Kiara (surname undecided) Age: 20
Hardcore otaku and a bad drunk. Studied abroad in Europe, a well-bred young lady. (Skipped grades.) Prefers bishoujo anime, addicted to collecting detailed figures. Her foreign otaku friends were like, "If you're going to Japan, beef bowls are quick, cheap, and nutritious.", so she came to the recommended-Ushiya.
She was raised on the island she lives on, but her family moved to the main island. Works at local airport. Her schedule's all over the place because of the shifts. Acts like a different person at the workplace. She's got the brains and the looks, but her personality's horrible, so it balances out.

Annie (surname undecided) Age: ?
Manages the beach house. Offers souvenirs, sea bathing goods, snacks and drinks. Closes shop at sunset.
Considered slender and petite among the locals. Dyes her hair blond for fashion, it's actually brown. Quite a bit older than she appears to be. Loves women, loves to fool around. She's a villain that even laid her hands on young Kiara. But she isn't possessive, and pushes Kiara to be able to stand on her own, so she's a good person to that extent.
Grew up here, but she met Kiara in a lesbian bar on the main island.

Games and reality aren't the same

Why is it that

I loved studying, and Europe wasn't bad either.
But every day, I thought, "This isn't it."
I couldn't imagine continuing to work and live there...

I don't know why, but it hurts so much...

I'm sure I could've gotten into a foreign company and worked hard like my father wanted me to.
But I just want to work at this island's tiny local airport.
Is that so bad? Is it something that can't be allowed?

I was just as unhappy in Tokyo.
I had an apartment to live in, a job, and even a few friends.
She wasn't strong enough...
But I get what it feels like.
But even so,
I felt that there was no place for me to relax

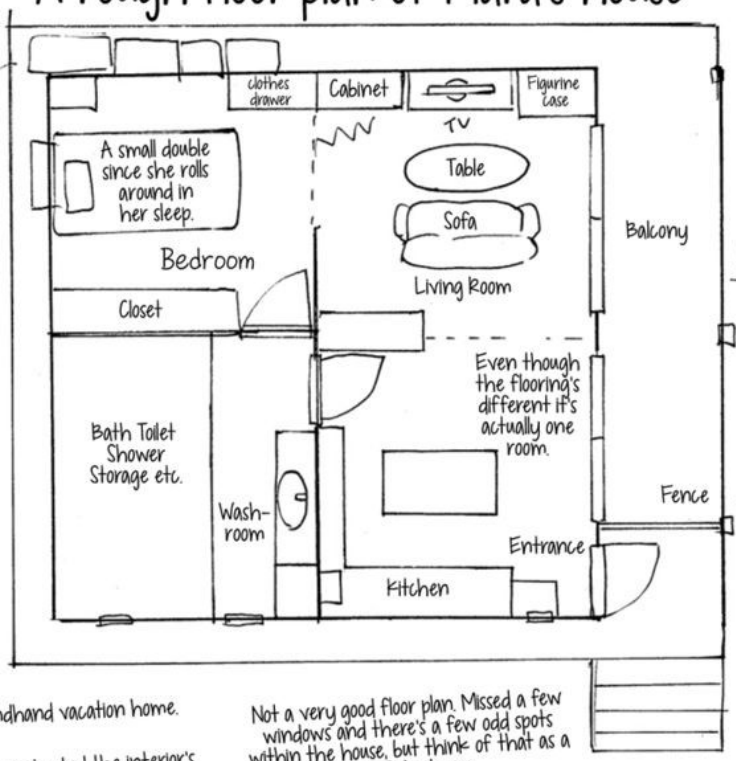
Chapter 3 END

A rough floor plan of Kiara's house



A secondhand vacation home.

Annie coordinated the interior's feminine style.

Not a very good floor plan. Missed a few windows and there's a few odd spots within the house, but think of that as a part of its charm...

An old (secondhand) car.
Can't get to the airports she works at without one.
Annie's beach house is within walking distance.
She drops Nozomi off at the store on her way to work.
In chapter 3 her father drove here from the airport in a rental car.

They do have a bathtub, but they don't use it. The shower room's small. When Kiara gets in the mood they spend quite a while in there. Ah, youth.
