

As a servant focusing on odd jobs, the conditions were good, but the dark rumors surrounding the place were making me begin to regret applying there.

Rumors.

"A monster lives in that mansion."
"Servants disappear from there, never to be heard from again."

That was the first impression I had after seeing her for the first time.

"If this is the monster told of in the rumor, I might not mind getting haunted to death by her."

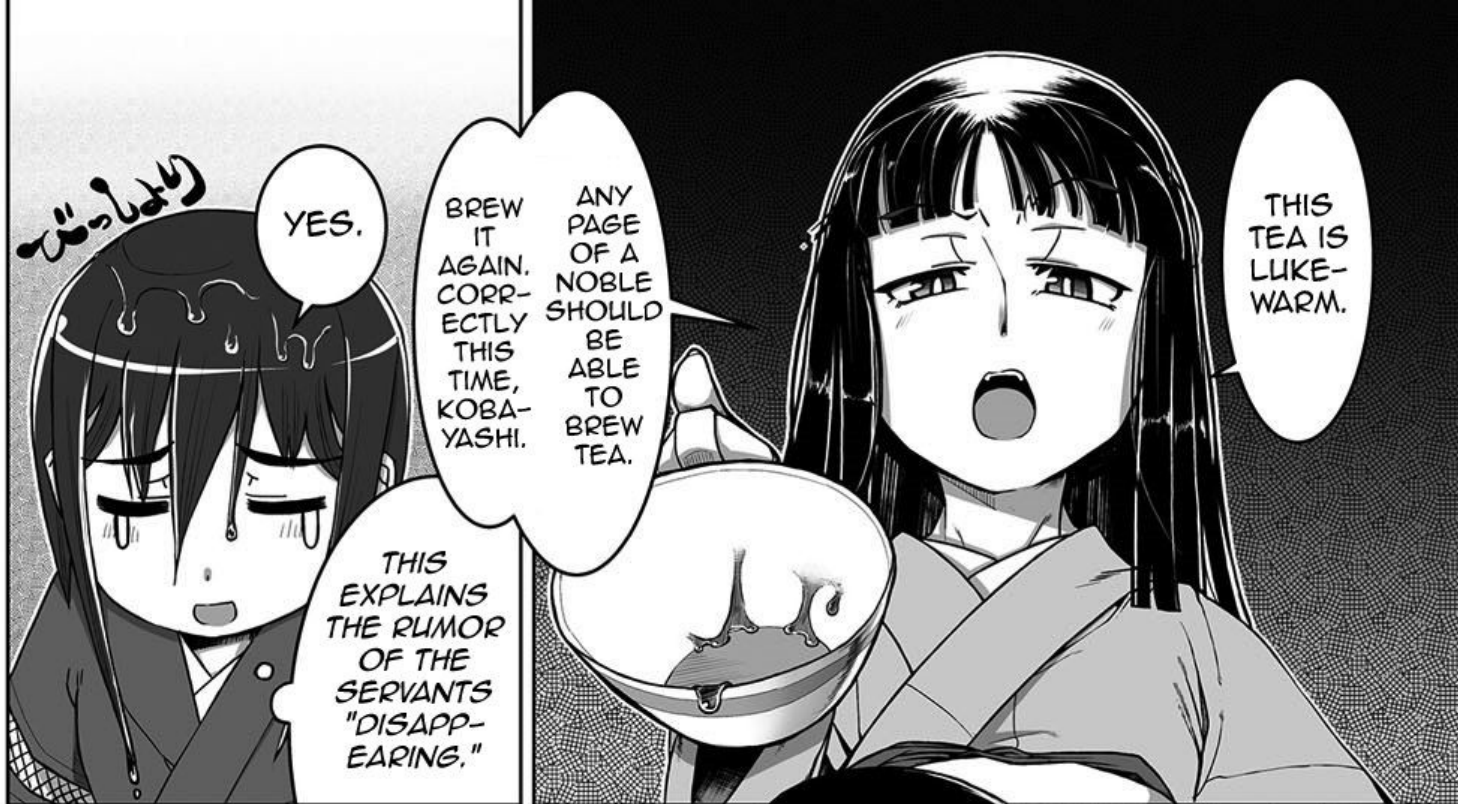

She was beautiful, like a wet blossom.

It was then that I coincidentally caught a glance of the side of her face as she stood on the veranda with a despondent look.

YES.

BREW IT AGAIN, CORRECTLY THIS TIME, KOBAYASHI. ANY PAGE OF A NOBLE SHOULD BE ABLE TO BREW TEA.

THIS TEA IS LUKE-WARM.

THIS EXPLAINS THE RUMOR OF THE SERVANTS "DISAPPEARING."

THEY ARE NOT VERY DIFFERENT.

I HEARD THE JOB WAS SUPPOSED TO BE FOR A HOUSE-KEEPER, NOT A PAGE...

Lady Hinoka.

She is the eldest daughter of this large estate, and my haughty master.

WHAT A USELESS PAGE.

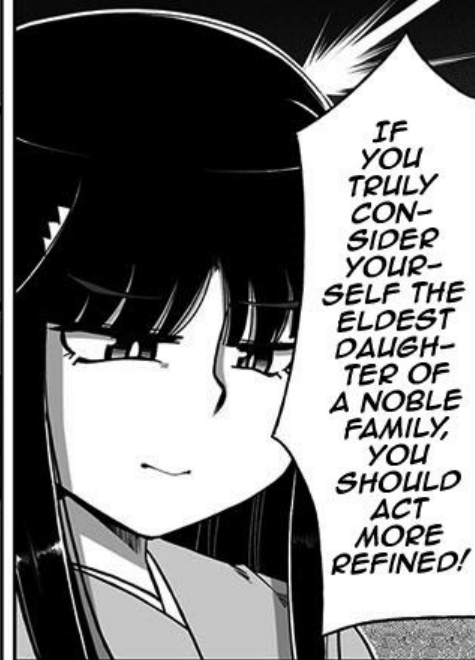

P- PLEASE, DO NOT TEASE ME...!

YOU HAVE QUITE A WELL PROPORTIONED FACE. PERHAPS A CAREER AS A MALE PROSTITUTE WOULD HAVE SUITED YOU BETTER, HMM?

She was born with a weak constitution and has never been permitted to leave the estate. Her behavior, likely due to this isolation, makes it feel as if things such as apprenticeships, or even feudalism itself has not been abolished completely, even in this, the Taishou era.*

*The Taishou period lasted from July 30th, 1912 to December 25th, 1926.

Comments: Trap pleasuring himself? Footjob!? Haughty LOLIBABA!? I'm there!
This was one of my personal favorites in a long time. The trap looked just girly enough, yet also had the body of a boy (such as on page 71 and 72). I also have a weak spot for lolibaba (shotajiji?), so that got to me as well. Unfortunately it's impossible to translate that into English, so I tried my best to go with an olden-timey feel. Not too old, as it was only 1912, not 1219, but old enough that it was obvious we weren't in the modern day. This is the kind of story I really enjoy translating because it's more than just the same lewd phrases on repeat. I'm a man who loves his lewd phrases, but it does get repetitive. Bottom line: I absolutely loved this. As you can maybe tell from how my "comments" section went from a couple sentences to a paragraph gushing about it. Oh well. It was good.
